Perils of Bull-Fighting.

One is accustomed to hear bull fighting denounced as both cruel and cowardly-cruel because of the suffering it inflicts upon animals, cowardly because the risk run by the bullfighter is infinitesimal. The first charge is absolutely true, so far at least as concerns the unfortunate horses. The second is equal-ly false, as the tragic death of Espartero should serve to teach the amateur critics who for the most part have never seen the spectacle they denounce in such unqualified terms.

If the Spaniards would only revive the original form of the sport they bor-rowed from the Moors—that is to say the riding, not of wretched cab horse only fit for the knacker and mounted by professional picadores, but of valua-ble horses, with "owners up," who would, of course, exercise their skill in trying to save their mounts—there would be little to be said against bull fighting on the score of cruelty. As to the current sneers at the cowardice of bullfighters, they are the outcomes of sheer ignorance. One has but to witness the entry into the ring of a fresh caught Andalusian bull twice the size and weight of a lion, fully as fierce and almost as active, to understand that every man in the ring carries his life in his hand, and that a momentary loss of nerve, of judgment or of footing will probally mean instant death.

That terrible fighting "spear"— Spaniard never talks of a bull's "horn" any more than an Englishman of a fox's "tail"-would make short work of any man who had not devoted the flower of his age to the study of the most perilous of all forms of sport. Those who have seen such daring and accomwho have seen such daring and accomplished toreros as Lagartijo or Frascuelo take the cloak from the hand of a subordinate and play with the infuriated beast as a child might with a kitten, knowing all the time that the slightest mistake would be fatal, cannot, if they speak the truth, refuse to admit that the combination of skill and governers is upparableled. The perils of courage is unparalleled. The perils of the plaza redeem the sport from the charge of cowardice, though not, as it is at present conducted, from that of cruelty .- London Graphic.

DYSON & BRO, 508 King St. sailles, and Miss Effie Ingraham, the only daughter of Frank Ingraham, a wealthy retired farmer living in Versailles, Brown county, decided to bring a three-years' courtship to a close, starting to go and be married at Clayton, and from there to Quincy. At Clayton the young lady saw a young School Books and School Supplies man who had been her former lover, and the old love within her heart was rekindled, and then and there she determined to turn the cold shoulder to Ernest and set about to capture the former Clayton lover. She determined not to go to Quincy, but to come to Bowen, so she gave the young lover the 'slip" and arrived here on the morning train. Young Glaze came here looking for her, ignorant of the fact that she wished to get rid of him. Bowen people were told by Miss Ingraham that Glaze was after her, and asked for protection; that he had sworn to kill her if she refused to marry him, as she was in love with the young Claytonite. She was taken to the home of a relative near Denver, where she was promsed protection, and relatives guarded the premises to see that young Glaze did not enter. Young Glaze arrived in search of the girl, with whom he was LOGUE will be mailed on application. deeply in love, but could gain no tidings of her, and started on the hunt for her. He visited every town in this section of the State, but could hear nothing of her. Subsequently he returned to Bowen, armed with the young lady's wedding trousseau and a $100 note, which she had given him to keep, and which was presented to her on her twenty-fifth wedding day. Young Glaze offer-ed large sums of money if some one would tell him where she was in hiding, but could obtain no news of her. Mr. Glaze says he never threatened to kill the girl.
